The Hong Kong Sports Institute (HKSI) and Hang Seng Bank are pleased to announce that cash incentives totalling HK$1,050,000 will be awarded to eight Hong Kong athletes through the Hang Seng Athlete Incentive Awards Scheme for their outstanding performances at the recently concluded 11th National Games. Between them, the athletes won two gold, one silver and four bronze medals.

Honours were given to cyclists Wong Kam-po, Chan Chun-hing and Alex John Hunter, equestrian athletes Patrick Lam, Cheng Man-kit, Samantha Lam and Lai Jing-man, as well as triathlete Lee Chi-wo. As the largest multi-sport Games held in China, the National Games attracts top athletes from all over the country.

Dr Eric Li, Chairman of the HKSI, appreciated the hard work and commitment of Hong Kong athletes at the Games: "The performances of Hong Kong athletes at this year's National Games were excellent. They achieved the best-ever result for Hong Kong at the Games. I believe that they were motivated to give their best when competing against the strong competitors from mainland China. Our athletes are now in peak condition for the upcoming East Asian Games in December, which will be staged in Hong Kong for the first time. We look forward to more excellent results and breakthroughs for Hong Kong."

Mrs Margaret Leung, Vice-Chairman and Chief Executive of Hang Seng Bank, said, "Hang Seng offers its heartfelt congratulations to Hong Kong's athletes on achieving outstanding results at the 11th National Games. Their perseverance and hard work fully demonstrates the spirit of excellence in sports. We are delighted to be working with the HKSI to offer cash awards to local medal winners. These incentives reflect the Bank's ongoing support for local athletes and provide encouragement to strive for new heights of accomplishment. We hope that Hong Kong's athletes will keep up their good work and bring honour to Hong Kong in the upcoming East Asian Games."
